3.4.1 Halliday's Method of Calculating Lexical Density (LDH), Grammatical Intricacy, the Grammar of the Clause Complex, and Embedding .......................88
3.4.1.1 The Clause Complex ..................................................89
3.4.1.2 Embedding of Clauses .................................................94
3.4.2 Further Investigation of the Lexical Density of the Texts and an Investigation of their Grammatical Intricacy ...................................................97
3.5 Measuring Readability ..........................................................103
3.5.1 Readability Formulae .......................................................103
3.5.2 Investigating the Readability of the Corpus ......................106
3.6 On the Relationship between the Variables .......................113

4. Text Complexity, Participant Identification and Cohesion in the Corpus ................................................................................123
4.1 Participant Identification in English: from Discourse Semantics to Lexicogrammar .................................................124
4.1.1 Participant Identification in English: a Review of some Relevant Contributions ..................................124
4.1.2 Phoricity and the Tracking System Network ...............129
4.1.3 The Participant Identification System Network ..........140
4.2 Semantics, Lexicogrammar and the Textual Metafunction: a Systemic Functional Perspective..................147
4.2.1 The Semantic and the Lexicogrammatical Strata in Systemic Functional Linguistics .................148
4.2.2 The Textual Metafunction: Cohesion and Thematic Structure in English .................................150
4.2.2.1 Cohesion in English..................................................151
4.2.2.2 Thematic Structure .................................................153
4.3 Participant Identification and the English Nominal Group.....157
4.4 The Role of Participant Identification and of Textual Cohesion in the Corpus .................................................164
4.4.1 Test 12..........................................................................165
4.4.2 Tests 2, 25 and 11.........................................................170
4.4.2.1 Test 2 ...................................................................171
5. Assessing Test Difficulty: Data Analysis of Tests and Feedback Questionnaires .............................................................211
  5.1 Setting the Scene for this Part of the Study ..................................................211
  5.2 Reliability and Validity in Language Testing ........................................213
  5.3 Test and Questionnaire Administration and Data Analysis ..............216
  5.4 Test Battery 1 (from Test 01 to Test 10) .................................................220
  5.5 Test Battery 2 (from Test 18 to Test 21) ..................................................240
  5.6 Test Battery 3 (Tests 11, 12, 22, and 23) ..............................................251
  5.7 Test Battery 4 (from Test 12 to Test 16) .................................................260
      5.7.1 From Test 13 to Test 16 .................................................................262
      5.7.2 Test 12 and the Perception of the Difficulty of the Tests in Battery 4 ........................................................271
  5.8 Test Battery 5 (Tests 17, 24 and 25) ......................................................278
  5.9 Relationship between Test Takers’ Performance, their Perception of Text/Task Difficulty and Results of the Quantitative Investigation .............................................289

6. Conclusions ..................................................................................295

References ........................................................................................309
Appendix ..........................................................................................321
Index .................................................................................................351